OXFORD COUNTY BOY SCOUT CAMP BOOMING

Second Week Registration, 85 Scouts. 200 Visitors Aug. 6. Gov. Baxter to Inspect Camp. International Paper Co. Donates Large Shipment of Mattresses.

The Oxford County Scout Camp is proving a great success. Everything is booming. The weather is exceptionally fine so far for camping and combined with the full camp program makes a snappy crowd of boys. The second week's registration has reached a total of 85 Scouts. 110 Oxford County Scouts have had or are enjoying the privilege of attending and boosting the largest and leading Scout camp in Northern New England.

Through the influence of P. E. McCarthy, General Supt. of the International Paper Company, Rumford branch, has made a donation of a large shipment of mattresses. These mattresses as well as a new shipment of cots received this week will accommodate 100 Scouts.

As a member of the Oxford County Council, Governor Baxter will inspect the Oxford County Scout camp while on his tour through this part of the County. He is expected in Locke's Mills on Aug. 12th or 13th.

This camp boasts of the best Commissary Department in New England. "Dad" Leonard and his competent assistant Bodwell, both of Andover, are unanimously pronounced as the best cooks in the State or anywhere else. Their camp stews and meats are without equal and every meal is served on the dot and 100 per cent O. K. The kitchen squad is an honor squad who believe in cleanliness. Practically every visitor has some creditable comment for this department.

FIRE ALARM TEST

The fire alarm whistle which was recently put up on the building owned by the Village Corporation near the store of the W. C. Bryant was given a try-out last Friday morning and proved successful. The alarm will be blown every day at 12.05 P. M., when one blast will be blown. The town will be divided into sections and each section will have a signal of its own so as to direct the fireman in case of fire. Remember that the alarm will be blown at five minutes past the noon hour each day, one blast. If there should be a fire the whistle will be blown more than once. It will be controlled from the Van Telephone Exchange.

TWO YOUNG MEN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT NEAR RUMFORD

Two young men were killed and three quite badly hurt as the result of an automobile accident on the Rumford Center road, near the residence of Mrs. Charles Abbott, about ten o'clock Saturday evening.

Those dead are Charles E. DeLong, 22, of Andover, and Clark Wagner, 25, of Industry. The injured ones are Stanley Holland, Raymond Bellows and Perry Delano all of Rumford.

DeLong and Wagner were returning to Industry from Andover, where they had been visiting Charles DeLong's father, Dean DeLong. DeLong was at the wheel of the Chevrolet when they collided with the Ford roadster driven by Stanley Holland. Both cars turned turtle, and were badly damaged, the Chevrolet getting the worst of it. They were both found later in the ditch. When picked up, DeLong was found to be breathing, and was rushed to the hospital, where he died from internal injuries a few moments later. Wagner's death was pronounced as instantaneous, due to a fractured skull. The occupants of the Ford were rather badly hurt by broken and flying glass, but will recover.

ROXBURY MAN LOSES LIFE IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Harold Knowles, proprietor of the Knowles Garage, at Roxbury, Maine, 33 years of age, was found dead under his Ford touring car by Charles Mills, early Saturday morning last. The accident took place on the Byron road near the M. C. R. crossing. Mr. Mills, who is a foreman on a State highway construction job near Rumford, found the machine buried almost out of sight in the bushes beside the road, bottom side up. He removed Knowles' body from the underpart, where he lay face downward in the dirt. Finding the man was dead, he summoned medical examiner Thibodeau, who stated that death was instantaneous due to a broken neck. It is thought that Knowles might have been blinded by lightning during the electrical storm of Friday evening last and lost control of his car. He is survived by a wife.

THE J. E. JONES LETTER

COMBINATIONS REPLACE COMPETITION

Mostly everybody knows that the Senate of the United States has been discussing the tariff for some months. The debate has grown so dry and tiresome that many people do not know what it is that the Senate has been talking about for several weeks. Vaguely the average newspaper reader knows that the rates on wool, silk, and pulp have recently been in controversy; and that we have had senatorial enlightenment concerning "valuations" either by the American plan or a European. Embargoes on dye stuff and other kinds of stuff about dyes have been discussed. The whole gamut of conversation has been run, and the Senate has failed to convince itself that it is going to create a tariff bill that will be approved by itself or the House of Representatives, in time to get onto Uncle Sam's law book before the Fall elections.

The old rule that competition regulates supply and demand isn't working any more. And then the other axiom that the tariff must equalize the difference between the "pauper labor of Europe" and the "high wages of America" is one of the first schedules in tariff logic that needs to be revised. Combinations have replaced competition and it is no longer possible to accurately measure price and wage-conditions that affect relations in the commerce of the world.

In consequence of all these changes the Republican Congress has tackled an almost impossible and endless job in trying to create a new protective tariff.

AS THE CASE NOW STANDS

The Republicans of the Senate are committed to pass the tariff and soldiers' bonus bills before this session of Congress ends. The President of the United States has declared it to be his judgment that Congress should not adjourn until the merchant marine bill has been passed. That is the party program, and the fulfillment of it before the Fall elections will only be possible in the event that Congress succeeds in shifting its gears from interminable into high speed.

A Democratic Senator has proposed an investigation of the Senate by its own committees for the purpose of unearthing Senators "financially interested in the production, manufacture or sale of any article or articles in or of said tariff bills." The resolution isn't taken seriously because the spotlight of

TO EVERY USER OF COAL IN MAINE

Do you realize how serious is the coal situation in your State, not only with reference to the matter of the shortage of the general supply of both hard and soft coal, but the difficulty there will be in obtaining even a modest supply to meet our extreme necessities from now until Spring?

Governor Baxter has undertaken to set up, in accordance with Federal suggestion, an organization in the State, through which coal must be obtained, if it is obtained at all. He needs, and it is entitled to, the full, hearty and unselfish co-operation of every citizen of the State, and if you who are users of coal obtain any supply at all; you must so co-operate.

The Governor is asking each dealer in hard coal to give him a statement, with reference to the supply on hand in his yard, and the requirements of his customers during the winter. Unless this information is promptly received, the Governor and his committee will be unable to give the Federal Fuel Distributor the necessary information upon which to base the allocation to Maine of its hard coal supply (assuming that the strike is settled, and there is any supply). It is possible that no soft coal will be received and distributed except through the Federal distributor, acting in conjunction with our State of Maine Distribution Committee. As the Federal regulation is somewhat universally understood, the Federal Distributor has absolute control of the distribution of coal to the several states. First comes railroad coal, and this will be allocated and distributed direct from Washington. Next comes the coal for public utilities, hospitals, public institutions, hotels, restaurants, and similar users, and next comes the industrial users, who are in the last class. As the Federal regulation is understood, there must be a Central State Committee to which all hard and soft coal will be consigned; and that committee will see to the distribution within the State. This committee must either make financial arrangements for the purchase of the coal, or procure it through a guarantee of the purchase price. Unless the Governor and his Committee know immediately what your stock of coal is at the present moment, and what your requirements for the future are, he will not be able to give to the Federal Distributor the information necessary. The state which most promptly puts its central committee in a position to give accurate information of their situation will in all probability be the one to which the necessary supply of coal will first begin to flow.

To those of you who feel that you have a contract with some dealer or with some operator, and that that contract will be carried out, let me say that there is considerable doubt with reference to this. Many believe that coal so purchased, even if actually on its way to you, may be taken by our Central Fuel Committee, and distributed either to a public utility which needs it, or to others in a class above the industrial user, and in that way coal purchased by you, and already on the way to you, may be diverted. In other words, it is possible that our entire supply of hard and soft coal will have to be purchased and distributed through this Central Committee, and the industrial user who thinks he has a binding contract may have to take his chances, unless he operates through this Central Committee.

In any event, the Governor and his Committee ought to have immediately the information from our industrial users of coal with reference to the stock they now have on hand, and their requirements for the future, to the end that if the Federal Distributor should rule that all coal, regardless of existing contracts, must be received by, and distributed through, these state central organizations, you will be in a position to receive just treatment in such distribution.

I therefore ask every industrial user of coal to immediately, by wire, give the Governor the information herein outlined, to the end that our Central Committee may be in a position to immediately present Maine's needs, and begin to supply Maine's wants. Let each corporation, or lesser industrial user, of soft coal feel that the success of our State Fuel Distributing Committee depends upon his particular prompt acquiescence to this request.

I am not speaking for the Governor, but am putting forth this statement in the interest of industrial users of soft coal, so that by helping the Governor's Committee they may be assisting themselves.

Very sincerely yours,
BENJ. F. CLEAVES,
Executive Secretary,
Associated Industries of Maine.

COMMUNITY CHAUTAUQUA

Closed Monday Evening After a Week of Fine Entertainments

Good crowds and good weather greeted the Chautauqua performers at every entertainment given this year.

The usual Junior Chautauqua parade on the first night was postponed until the second day on account of muddy roads, caused by the rain of the day before the arrival of the Chautauqua.

The entertainments opened on Tuesday evening, Aug. 1, with the Morgedda Musical Company which was enjoyed by the large number present.

The second day opened with a concert by the Manila Quartet, composed of three young men from the Philippines and a young woman. This was an interesting group and their varied program called forth favorable comments from all present. In the evening this company gave a short program preceding the lecture given by Dr. William Hung of China. His subject was "China in the World Drama." Dr. Hung was a very interesting speaker and held the attention of the audience while he pleaded for a continuation of and increase in the existing co-operation between America and China along the lines of civilization and republicanism.

Thursday brought out what some termed as the best day's program with a lecture by Mrs. Nancy Schoonmaker in the afternoon on "The Old Road and the New Trail." Mrs. Schoonmaker is a woman of note and a speaker of force and ability. In the evening the Boston Light Opera Company presented Gilbert and Sullivan's time-honored light opera, "The Mikado," and the audience thoroughly enjoyed the fine acting and singing.

Friday's entertainment was furnished by the Louise Lancaster Company in the afternoon, Miss Lancaster rendering several of the old familiar songs in costume. In the evening Miss Evelyn Bargett, crayon artist and cartoonist, entertained the audience with her drawings and readings which were much enjoyed.

The afternoon performance of Saturday was given by the Little Symphony Orchestra, and the lecture, "Community Ideals," was given by Prof. David D. Vaughan in the evening. This lecture was very interesting and is printed on another page in this issue.

Sunday evening a union service was held in the big tent and a large crowd was in attendance to listen to another lecture by Prof. Vaughan, "The World Sweep of Democracy," was the subject of his discourse and he kept his audience interested by his pleasing manner and forceful delivery.

Monday's entertainments closed the Chautauqua for 1922. In the afternoon the children reigned supreme previous to a concert by the Fadette Military Band composed entirely of women. What the children didn't do for stunts is not worth mentioning. They enjoyed the afternoon immensely and so made a pleasant afternoon for the grown-ups. In the evening the Fadette Band furnished a very pleasing program, after which the curtain was drawn on the 1922 Chautauqua for Bethel.

Mr. E. C. Park was in Portland on business, Friday.

Miss Gladys Jenner has returned home from Bridgton.

Mrs. Fred A. Tibbets of Portland is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Ella Carter.

It is expected that Governor Baxter will speak in Rumford on Friday evening of this week. He will be accompanied by the Republican County committee, Mrs. Guy P. Gannett, State committeewoman from Augusta, Congressman White, and the candidates for county offices.

The Redpath Chautauqua opens its program in Rumford on Aug. 31, and continues through Sept. 6.

Investigation reveals an alarming shortage of coal in Rumford, the town's required winter supply being short seven thousand tons, with small prospect of obtaining more. The Oxford Paper Company mill here is at present consuming about 400 tons per day, according to a statement of one of their officials, and they have only a sufficient supply on hand to keep them going until about the middle of September. Naturally local coal dealers are feeling depressed over the situation, and apparently have little hope of there being any settlement of matters in time to furnish Maine, incidentally Rumford, with a supply adequate for the winter months.

The Selectmen announce that all the schools are supplied with coal, and also that the Municipal Building has its winter supply in the bins. But what is really alarming is the fact that but 15 per cent of the needed supply for Rumford has been delivered, and there is no more in the coal yards, with small likelihood of their being any for some time to come.

Miss Grace H. Hall of Belfast has been appointed successor to Miss Annie L. Barr, the Rumford librarian, who left this week to take up her duties as librarian at the Lewiston public library.

Miss Hall, who comes here on the recommendation of the retiring librarian, has had ten years experience in library work, having been, during that period, assistant librarian at the Belfast public library in Belfast, Me., and she has attended Harvard and Columbia summer schools. During the war she served her country in the Quartermasters Department, being stationed at Washington. As the Belfast library is recognized as one of the best in the State, an endowed institution carrying over 20,000 volumes, the training Miss Hall has received there equips her admirably for the local position. Miss Roberline Howe, who has had some experience in library work under Miss Barr, will carry on the library during the month of August, under the guidance of Miss Barr until Miss Hall arrives the first of September.

The new program of the Searchlight Club for 1922-1923 have been given out. They are very dainty and neat. The covers are plain heavy paper of a light brown color, and the picture of a small searchlight with rays of light radiating over the words "Searchlight Club," and on the back page of the cover is each member's initials, all done by hand in brown ink, and the books are tied with brown ribbon. The work was all done by Mrs. Sarah G. Latham, the chairman of the topic committee. The officers for the coming year are:

President—Mrs. Emma B. Howe.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Marion Booker.
Rec. Sec.—Louise Harris.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Mary Mille.
Treasurer—Mrs. Carolyn Small.
Topic Com.—Mrs. Sarah Latham, chairman, Mrs. Carolyn Small, Mrs. Helen H. Hantson, Miss Annie L. Barr.

A page is devoted to the creed. The members of the Club have another page, and each meeting has a page devoted to it, giving the names of hostess, leader, and the writers of the various papers.

The people of Andover were shocked Sunday morning when they learned that Charles DeLong of this town and Clark Wagner of Rumford were dead from the result of an automobile collision on the road to Rumford Falls.

The young men were riding to Rumford late Saturday evening when near the Charles Abbott farm a Ford car containing three young men came upon them. Both cars were wrecked and DeLong and Wagner were rushed to McCarthy's hospital, where DeLong died shortly after arrival, and Wagner died at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. The occupants of the Ford car were uninjured.

Charles DeLong was the only son of Sylvanus DeLong and was about 22 years of age. He is survived by his father, a step-mother, and two sisters, who have the sympathy of the community in their great loss.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held at the Congregational church, Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Chester Gore Miller of South Paris conducted the service. Beautiful flowers covered the casket, silent tribute of the love and esteem in which the young man was held. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Investigation reveals an alarming shortage of coal in Rumford, the town's required winter supply being short seven thousand tons, with small prospect of obtaining more. The Oxford Paper Company mill here is at present consuming about 400 tons per day, according to a statement of one of their officials, and they have only a sufficient supply on hand to keep them going until about the middle of September. Naturally local coal dealers are feeling depressed over the situation, and apparently have little hope of there being any settlement of matters in time to furnish Maine, incidentally Rumford, with a supply adequate for the winter months.

The Selectmen announce that all the schools are supplied with coal, and also that the Municipal Building has its winter supply in the bins. But what is really alarming is the fact that but 15 per cent of the needed supply for Rumford has been delivered, and there is no more in the coal yards, with small likelihood of their being any for some time to come.

Miss Grace H. Hall of Belfast has been appointed successor to Miss Annie L. Barr, the Rumford librarian, who left this week to take up her duties as librarian at the Lewiston public library.

Miss Hall, who comes here on the recommendation of the retiring librarian, has had ten years experience in library work, having been, during that period, assistant librarian at the Belfast public library in Belfast, Me., and she has attended Harvard and Columbia summer schools. During the war she served her country in the Quartermasters Department, being stationed at Washington. As the Belfast library is recognized as one of the best in the State, an endowed institution carrying over 20,000 volumes, the training Miss Hall has received there equips her admirably for the local position. Miss Roberline Howe, who has had some experience in library work under Miss Barr, will carry on the library during the month of August, under the guidance of Miss Barr until Miss Hall arrives the first of September.

The new program of the Searchlight Club for 1922-1923 have been given out. They are very dainty and neat. The work was all done by Mrs. Sarah G. Latham, the chairman of the topic committee. The officers for the coming year are:

President—Mrs. Emma B. Howe.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Marion Booker.
Rec. Sec.—Louise Harris.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. Mary Mille.
Treasurer—Mrs. Carolyn Small.
Topic Com.—Mrs. Sarah Latham, chairman, Mrs. Carolyn Small, Mrs. Helen H. Hantson, Miss Annie L. Barr.

The people of Andover were shocked Sunday morning when they learned that Charles DeLong of this town and Clark Wagner of Rumford were dead from the result of an automobile collision on the road to Rumford Falls.

The young men were riding to Rumford late Saturday evening when near the Charles Abbott farm a Ford car containing three young men came upon them. Both cars were wrecked and DeLong and Wagner were rushed to McCarthy's hospital, where DeLong died shortly after arrival, and Wagner died at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. The occupants of the Ford car were uninjured.

Charles DeLong was the only son of Sylvanus DeLong and was about 22 years of age. He is survived by his father, a step-mother, and two sisters, who have the sympathy of the community in their great loss.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held at the Congregational church, Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Chester Gore Miller of South Paris conducted the service. Beautiful flowers covered the casket, silent tribute of the love and esteem in which the young man was held. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

THE J. E. JONES LETTER

pitiless publicity is shining on every phase of tariff proposals. An investigation would only be another time killer.

A GOOD DEAL LIKE A HORSE RACE
"Position" in a horse race is not considered unfair. The grandstand patrons and the betters are all interested in this feature of the race. The tariff-makers of the Senate have for months been "jockeying for position," and in the grandstand and among those throughout the country particularly interested in the different jockeys has been a keen rivalry. The Senator who isn't seeking the best kind of a bargain he can get in this international tariff accounting is not giving satisfaction to his constituency. Most of the fundamental features that have governed tariff-makers in the past have been changed, but, despite every candidate, the tariff still continues to be regarded by "practical" politicians as "a local issue."

IGNORING THE UMPIRE
The country has been facing "economic upsets" for several years. The rail and coal strikes have presented disputes in the economic game that called for decisions by the umpire. But the rail and coal men have been too much like the "foul language" team that fought for supremacy in the base ball game and defied the umpire when he gave a base decision. President Harding has asserted that he will enforce the law, and the country waits anxiously to find out just how far the "umpire" will go.

THE BUSINESS PULSE
The economic situation in this country is being watched by the business community with keen interest. The Federal Reserve Board and the Department of Commerce are the two agencies that are most responsible for the business pulse. There is a feeling of a firm base in the economic situation of the country. The business community is feeling more confident than it has for some time. The Federal Reserve Board has been successful in its efforts to maintain a stable monetary policy. The Department of Commerce has been successful in its efforts to promote the growth of the business community. The business community is feeling more confident than it has for some time. production in highly finished lines of manufacture as well as in basic industries. Iron and steel have shown increased production, and there is significance in the automobile situation. Expensive distribution methods are everywhere being cut and the manufacturers have come to regard the "used car" as a serious competitor in sales. As a result there is all kinds of price-cutting and a clearly defined inclination on the part of manufacturers to make up in increased production what they will lose in the profits on smaller numbers of sales.

In the building line the activity has continued practically unabated. Contracts during May amounted to $323,000,000 throughout the country. This was about 50 per cent larger than during the same month last year. There has also been a steady improvement in shoe manufacturing. The official comment says that "most staple crops have shown improvement during the past month, and the approach of midsummer finds the farming community as a whole anticipating fully average yields." So on the whole, it may be observed that the business pulse of the Nation beats "steady and strong."

THE BRITISH DEBT MOVE

Great Britain offers to wipe the slate clean of all war debts owed it by foreign countries, provided the United States will cancel the $4,500,000,000 owed to us by Britain. The position of the British Government is that it can afford to be "fatherly" to the other Nations providing it does not have to go back to its own taxpayers to raise the money with which to pay what it owes the United States.

This proposal is not entirely unexpected at Washington, although Secretary Hughes and his advisers find the suggestion very unwelcome. It is said that Lloyd George originally made this proposal to former President Wilson, and that the suggestion has been constantly kept alive in the diplomatic world.

There have been a good many suggestions by leaders in America thought that harmonize with the British proposal. One offer another of the financial world who have carried personally conducted and personally exploited expeditions in Europe have returned to demand the cancellation of all war debts. But the American Government has not been sympathetic with the suggestion of those who would again "have sympathy" for the European governments and their debts.

BOBBED HAIR

The National Hair Dressers Association has passed a resolution against the bobbed hair movement. The subject has not yet reached Washington in an official way, but it is safe to say that the press of the country will sooner or later receive copy from the "bobbed hair league," which is the only new fact without special representation in Washington. One of Washington's leading newspapermen's an editorial endorsing the short hair movement. "Long hair," it says, "always has been a badge of racial inferiority." The women of the capital by the then-

This was on Sunday. Rathburn took the dog trail.

"Want a dog?" he asked, browsed, unkempt man sl door of a snug cabin. "Well, I don't. I ain't these days."

"Yer don't have ter buy observed Rathburn merrily. The other glanced up eyes.

"Humph!" grunted the o to the dog: "Come here, have a look at yer!"

In Which the Love of a Dog Far Outshines That of a Master, Who Doesn't Deserve the Title.

ON Monday Rathburn took the dog far up the trail. Stub was no blue-ribbon, petted dog of records and pedigree; he was a vicious-looking little yellow cur of mixed ancestry and bad habits—that is, he had been all this when Rathburn found him six months before and championed his cause in a quarrel with a crowd of roughs in Mike Swaney's saloon. Since then he had developed into a well-behaved little beast with a pair of watling eyes that looked unutterable love.

Rathburn had rescued the dog that day in the saloon from the hands of the designs of Pete Mulligan, the head of the gang and an old enemy, than for any compassion for the dog itself; but after he had taken the little animal home he rather enjoyed the slavish devotion which—in the dog's mind—seemed evidently to be the only return for so great a service as had been done him. For some months, therefore, Rathburn petted the dog, fed him, taught him to "speak" and to "beg," and made of him an almost constant companion. At the end of this time, the novelty having worn thin, he was ready—as he expressed it to himself—to call the whole thing off, and great was his disgust that the dog failed to see the affair in the same light.

For some time, Rathburn endured the plaintive whines, the questioning eyes, the frequent thrusts of a cold little nose against his hand; then he determined to end it all.

"Stub, come here!" he called sharply, his right hand seeking his pocket.

With a yelp of joy the dog leaped forward—not for days had his master voluntarily noticed him.

Rathburn raised his pistol and took careful aim. His eye was steady and his hand did not shake. Two feet away the dog had come to a sudden halt. Something in the eye or in the leveled weapon had stayed his feet.

He whined, then whined, his eyes all the while wistfully demanding an explanation. Suddenly, his gaze fixed on his master's face, he rose upright on his haunches and held before him two little dangling paws.

There was a silence, followed by a muttered oath, as the pistol dropped to the ground.

"Confound my babyishness!" snarled Rathburn, stooping and pocketing his weapon. "One would think I'd never seen a gun before."

This was on Sunday. On Monday Rathburn took the dog far up the trail.

"Want a dog?" he said to a low-browed, unkempt man sitting at the door of a squat cabin.

"Well, I don't. I ain't buyin' dogs these days."

"Er don't have ter buy this one," observed Rathburn meaningly.

The other, glanced up with sharp eyes.

"Humph! Biter?" he snapped. Rathburn shook his head.

"Stick of him," he returned inconceivably. "Like his room better'n his company."

"Humph!" grunted the other. Then to the dog: "Come here, air, let's have a look at ye!"

Five minutes later Rathburn strode down the trail alone, while behind him, on the other side of the fast-shut cabin door, barked and scratched a frantic little yellow dog.

Tuesday night, when Rathburn came home, the first sound that greeted him was a joyous bark, as a quivering, eager little creature leaped upon him out of the dark.

On Wednesday Stub trotted into town at Rathburn's heels, and all the way down the straggling street he looked neither to the right nor to the left, so fearful did he seem that the two great boots he was following should in some way slip from his sight. And yet, vigilant as he was, the door of Swaney's saloon got somehow between him and left him on one side barking and whining and running like mad about the room, while on the other his master stood jingling the two pieces of silver in his pocket—the price Mike Swaney had paid for his new dog.

Halfway up the mountain-side Rathburn was still chuckling, still jingling his coins.

"When a man pays money," he was saying aloud, as he squared his shoulders and looked across the valley at the setting sun, "when a man pays money he watches out. I reckon Stub has gone for good, sure thing, this time!" And yet—long before dawn there came a whine and a gentle scratch at his cabin door; and although four times the dog was returned to his new owner, four times he escaped and nosed the long trail that led to the cabin on the mountain-side.

After Stub's fourth desertion the saloon-keeper refused to take him again, and for a week the dog lay unloved in his old place in the sun outside the cabin door, or dozed before the fireplace at night. Then Rathburn bestirred himself and made one last effort, taking the dog quite over the mountain and leaving him tied to a tree.

At the end of thirty-six hours, Rathburn was congratulating himself at the end of thirty-seven he was crying, "Down, sir—down!" to a joy-crazed little dog which had come leaping down the mountain-side with eighteen inches of rope dangling at his heels—a rope whose frayed and tattered end showed the marks of sharp little teeth.

Rathburn gave it up after that, and Stub stayed on.

As the days passed food became scarce in the cabin. It had been some time since Rathburn had gone to town for supplies. Then came the day when a great joy came into Stub's life—his master spoke to him. It was not the old fond greeting, to be sure.

And so it came about that Stub, in obedience to that sharp command, frequently scampered off with his master to spend long days in the foothills, or following the mountain streams. Sometimes it was a partridge, sometimes it was a squirrel or a rabbit—whatever it was that fell a victim to Rathburn's gun, Stub learned very soon that it must be brought at once to the master and laid at his feet.

It was on one of the days when work, not hunting, fitted the time, that Rathburn came home after a long day's labor to find Stub waiting for him with a dead rabbit. After that it came to be a common thing for the dog to trot off by himself in the morning; and this time he felt more and more in the way of letting him go alone, as it left his own time the more free for the pursuit of that golden spirit who was ever promising success just ahead.

As for Stub—Stub was happy. He spent the long days in the foothills or on the mountain-side, and soon became an expert in his hunting.

Gradually as the days passed there came still another change in the life at the cabin. Rathburn's step became slow, and his cheeks sunken. Sometimes he did not leave home all day, but lay tossing from side to side on his bunk in the corner. At such times, if the man would rouse himself enough to stir the fire and get supper; and always, after such a day at home, Rathburn was astir the next morning at dawn and off in feverish haste for a long day's work to make up for the long day of idleness.

But there came a time when he could not do this—when each day found him prone on his bunk or moving feebly about the room. Then came a night when Stub's bark at the door was unanswered. Again and again Stub demanded admittance only to be met with silence. The door, though unlatched, was swollen from recent rains, and it took five good minutes and all the strength of one small dog to push it open a narrow foot, and then there were only silence and a dying fire by way of greeting.

Stub dropped his burden on the floor and whined. He was particularly proud tonight; he had brought home a partridge—the first he had ever caught without the aid of his master's gun.

The figure on the bed did not move. The dog picked up the bird he had dropped and walked toward his master. This time he laid his offering close to the bunk and barked.

The man stirred and groaned. For long minutes the dog stood motionless, watching; then he crept to the fire and almost into the hot ashes in his efforts to warm the blood of his shivering little legs.

In the morning the fire was quite out. Stub stretched his stiffened body and gazed about the room. Over on the bed the man did not stir nor speak. The dead bird lay untouched at his side. There was a white, a bark, and a long minute of apparent indecision; then the dog pattered across the floor, wormed himself through the partly open door, and took the trail that led to the foothills.

Three times Stub brought to the fireless, silent cabin the result of his day's hunt and laid it at his master's side, and always there was only silence or a low groan to greet him.

On the third night it snowed—the first storm of the season. A keen wind swept down the mountain and played hide-and-seek with the cabin door, so that in the morning a long bar of high-piled snow lay across the cabin floor.

When the men from the village ploughed their way through the snow and pushed open the door, they stopped amazed upon the threshold, looking at one another with mingled alarm and pity; then one of them, conquering his reluctance, strode forward. He stopped for a moment over the prostrate form of the man before he turned and faced his companions.

"Boys, he's gone," he said huskily; and in the silence that followed, four men bowed their heads.

It was a dog's low whine that first stirred into action the man by the bunk. He looked down and his eyes grew luminous. He saw the fireless hearth, the drifted snow, and the half-dead dog keeping watchful guard over a pile of inert fur and feathers on the floor—a pile frozen stiff and mute, witnessing a daily duty well performed.

"I reckon I'm needin' a dog," he said, as he stooped and patted Stub's head.

GIRLS CLOSE EYES IN MOVIES

Were Determined for Once to See a Picture From Its Beginning to Its End.

The last scenes of a film drama were flickering to their inevitable denouement. The fight between the hero and the villain was over, the chasing of automobiles had been so far exhausted that there was hardly a character who hadn't chased or been chased by every other character.

Suddenly a woman in the audience noticed two nice girls near her whose eyes were peacefully closed. Her heart went out to them in sympathy, for she assumed that they were blind and that they went to the movies just to hear the professor punch the piano, although that seemed too awful to be true.

But when the picture ended and the lights flashed on, the two girls opened four perfectly good eyes, looked at each other and smiled.

"Did you really keep your eyes shut?" demanded one. "Honest to goodness I did—but did you?" countered the other.

"Cross my heart and hope to die," averred the first, "but it took a lot of self-control. However, I was determined for once to see a picture from the beginning instead of from the middle."—New York Sun.

DESERVED HONORS PAID HIM

Monument at Washington Recalls Notable Services Rendered by Indian Chief to Young Republic.

In the old Congressional cemetery at Washington stands a monument, the subject of which is known to very few of even the well-informed citizens of this country. It commemorates Pushmataha, a Choctaw Indian chief whose remains lie underneath. The monument was erected by his brother chiefs who were associated with him in a delegation to Washington in 1824.

Pushmataha was chiefly celebrated for his unflinching friendship for the young American republic, and throughout his life he was able to demonstrate this friendship in various valuable ways.

During the War of 1812 he headed the Indians who composed a portion of Andrew Jackson's army, and his services in that conflict were so noteworthy that Jackson granted him a commission as brigadier general. He co-operated with the white authorities in the removal of the Choctaws from their original location in the Mississippi territory to what was later Indian Territory. He died in 1824 while on a visit to Washington in connection with this removal.

FRANKLIN KEPT HIS LAURELS

Appropriately, Apostle of Thrift Was Allowed to Retain Ornaments for Exceptional Time.

New York, the Sun of that city states, is one place where there are almost laurels enough to go around. It is the custom of the city to be generous with them, but they never last. Three days is about the limit.

That is, three days marks about the length of time when the crowd will endure the sight of them on the living. After that they view them with amusement. But when hung on a bronze or marble statue by common consent and the custom of the park department they are given thirty days.

Benjamin Franklin was permitted to keep his laurels longer than most statues. Although it was by reason of his very many illustrious qualities that his statue became a landmark in Park row, it was particularly because of his position as a patron saint of all those who hold thrift as a cardinal-virtue that he was adorned some weeks ago with more wreaths than any Hawaiian ever managed to hang on himself.

To keep them, too, until they were of absolutely no more use. The day they were put up people traveled from all five boroughs to gaze at the bronze likeness of the publisher of "Poor Richard's Almanac"—that first of all the best sellers of America—and to consider their own sins or to contemplate their own virtues in the matter of thrift. But this week when they were cut down no one paid the slightest attention to the two "white wings" who were climbing about the pedestal, jerking down the wreaths and slinging them on the pavement.

GOT NAME FROM INDIAN CHIEF

How the City of Medicine Hat, in Canada, Acquired Its Decidedly Odd Cognomen.

Medicine Hat, the Canadian city which figures so prominently in weather reports, and which possesses undoubtedly one of the most extraordinary names of all the cities of the world, acquired its title from an old Blackfoot chief whose topee stood on the site which is today the center of the city. He was chiefly celebrated for an amazing head-gear to which he attributed magical powers, and which he called his "medicine hat." Good fortune was supposed to attend him whenever he wore it, whether at war or on the hunt.

Once a great battle was fought between the Blackfeet and the Crees on the site of the present city. The fight went against the Crees and, just as they prepared to leave the field, a strong gust of wind caught the "medicine hat," lifted it off the head of the chief and deposited it in the river. This was considered an evil omen and the Blackfeet immediately fled to the mountains in great disorder.

DON'T RISK NEGLECT

Don't neglect a constant backache, sharp, darting pains or urinary disorders. The danger of dropsy or Bright's disease is too serious to ignore. Use Doan's Kidney Pills as have your friends and neighbors. A Bethel case.

F. M. Wood, 4 Park St., says: "My kidneys began to annoy me after I had strained my back lifting. My back ached pretty badly and I was in 'bad shape' for a long time. When I took cold, my kidneys became congested and at times they acted irregularly. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended, so I began to use them and they took hold of the trouble quickly. I soon had relief from the backache and the action of my kidneys was corrected. I use Doan's now occasionally and am always benefited. I always keep the remedy on hand, getting my supply at Bossman's Drug Store." (Statement given June 8, 1916.)

On September 9, 1920, Mr. Wood said: "Doan's Kidney Pills have done fine work whenever I have used them for any sign of kidney weakness. I think just as highly of Doan's today as when I first endorsed them."

A QUARANTINED QUARREL

Showing That Love, Not Unlike Other Diseases of a Catching Nature, May Profit by Quarantine.

By ELEANOR PORTER

Author of "Pollyanna," "Just David," Etc.

Copyright by Eleanor H. Porter.

THE airy indifference of the girl's manner and the stilted pomposity of the man's words made the quarrel a comedy; the ache in the girl's heart and the choke in the man's throat made it a tragedy.

Rainsford, his head high, thrust the discarded diamond into his pocket and strode into the hall. It was at that moment that the fussy little doctor from the village came down the stairs.

"There is no doubt, madam," he was saying to Mrs. Kenton, who was alone behind him. "It is a well-developed case of diphtheria and the very greatest caution is necessary."

The man in the hall below caught up his hat and stalked to the outer door.

"Here, here, Mr. Rainsford," called the doctor, agitatedly, "you mustn't do that!"

"Mustn't do what?" he demanded, throwing aside the door.

"You mustn't go out, you are quarantined."

"Quarantined?"

"Yes, sir—quarantined," reiterated the doctor. "There is a case of diphtheria upstairs and not a soul can leave this house until I give permission."

At Rainsford's dismayed ejaculation Mrs. Kenton came quickly forward.

"My dear boy," she soothed, "don't let it fret you for a moment. We shall be delighted to have you with us. Just think, you will be a regular godsend to us through all these lonely days ahead; and Dorothy—it will be so nice for Dorothy."

"But, Mrs. Kenton, I can't—there are reasons why I—"

Rainsford paused irresolutely. "Nonsense—not a word! Come—run into the other room to Dorothy."

Hardly conscious of voluntary movement, Rainsford found himself a moment later facing Miss Dorothy Kenton, who sat limp and silent, upon the living room sofa.

"You heard?" he asked.

She nodded her head.

"Pleasant prospect—for you," he observed.

"But what—what are we going to do?" she faltered.

His hands executed an expressive semicircle.

"But it's ridiculous," she continued, with some heat. "The idea of our being shut up in the same house in this absurd fashion now; if it had been before, why—"

For some unaccountable reason his spirits rose.

"Can't help it—it's a case of quarantine," he rejoined.

At that moment Mrs. Kenton came into the room.

"Well, my children, this is an experience, isn't it?" she exclaimed. "I don't suppose it will trouble you much, though," she went on with a faint smile.

"What did the doctor say of father?" interposed Dorothy, with feverish eagerness.

Mrs. Kenton's face lengthened.

"Well, it's diphtheria—and that's bad; still, he says it's a light case. We are fortunate in having Miss Merriman—she's a fine nurse. But I do wish Doctor Kane was here. We've sent for him, however, and if he's in the city he'll surely come. This is the first time anything like this has ever happened when we've taken a cottage at one of these summer places."

"And my being thrust upon you in this absurd fashion is anything but pleasant for you," asserted Rainsford.

"My dear boy," remonstrated Mrs. Kenton, "we're delighted! Of course I shall have to be with Mark more or less, and I fear you two will be left pretty much to your own devices, but I presume—"

"Er—mother," Dorothy broke in hastily. "I can help, you know."

"There's not a thing for you to do, dear, except to make it as pleasant as possible for our captive here."

The house was very quiet when Rainsford came downstairs the next morning. He fingered the books on the center table, picked up a magazine, dropped it, then wandered out to the veranda, which extended around three sides of the house.

"Well, by Jove," he muttered wrathfully, marching to and fro, "I'll stand this thing just one hour longer until I see Mrs. Kenton, then—I'll run for it!"

His feet were brought to an abrupt stop at the extreme end of the veranda where an open door led apparently into the kitchen. Rainsford before the door was Mrs. Kenton.

"Since when have you been a fire-watcher?" he asked.

Mrs. Kenton laughed merrily.

"Jack, what's the matter with this stove? I've opened all the slides and doors I can find, but—" she stopped suddenly her cheeks scarlet. "It is going very nicely now, Mr. Rainsford; you needn't trouble," she said lightly.

Again Rainsford's spirits unaccountably rose. He stepped into the room and peered into the grate where three charred sticks smoked with occasional spits of fire. "This might make a slight difference," he observed gravely.

"By the Phial Ladies Socy."

reaching up and turning the damper in the stovepipe. A minute later, with the aid of some small sticks he had the fire burning briskly. After being assured that the sick man was no worse, Rainsford said:

"Might I inquire—without exceeding the limits of our prescribed fellowship—if this is your usual morning pastime?"

Miss Kenton's eyes flashed and her chin rose perceptibly. "The cook has gone," she replied with some dignity.

"Gone?"

"Yes—ran away in the night—afraid."

"And Nora?"

"Gone!"

Rainsford gave a sharp ejaculation.

"The miserable cowards—to leave you like this! What are you going to do?"

"Do? I'm going to get breakfast—perhaps you'll run now," she finished, something like a twinkle in her eyes.

"You couldn't hire me to," he returned, with a promptness that gave no hint of his recent determination quite to the contrary; then he added: "I can make fine coffee, Dorothy, and—"

"I can get along very nicely by myself, Mr. Rainsford," interposed Miss Kenton, with sudden hauteur.

"Oh—transgressed, that time, didn't I?" murmured Rainsford, cheerfully.

"Mustn't—Go—Out!" returned Rainsford Stupidly.

with uplifted eyebrows, as he picked up the basket and went out into the shed for more wood. Dorothy looked after him for a helpless moment, turned, and went into the pantry. She was standing irresolutely before the empty bread jar when he came back and peeped in at the door.

"Might make a corn cake," he suggested.

"Why, I've forgotten—I did know how once—but there's a rule—it must be somewhere," she replied disconcertedly, poking inquiring fingers into the drawer at her left.

"I know how," announced Rainsford, airily. "Well, I've have to have mother's old dish with the two cracks and a nick in it to tell me how to measure the things," he added with a mischievous glance.

Miss Kenton's back stiffened.

"I learned at cooking school, of course," she began, with some dignity; "but I have not practiced any of the things lately, only rubbings, and creamed things, and a cake now and then—Oh, let's the book!" she finished.

When Miss Kenton came into the kitchen a minute later she found an array of raw beefsteak, cold potatoes, and a cantaloupe on the table.

"Found 'em in the refrigerator," chuckled Rainsford. "I'll broil the meat when the time comes—done it lots of times in camp; I know how to fix the potatoes in great shape, too," he added.

"Oh, that's fine!" cried Dorothy softly, almost clapping her hands; but the tips of her fingers had scarcely come together before the smile left her lips and eyes. "If fear you are giving yourself too much trouble, Mr. Rainsford," she said, in quite another voice.

"Trouble? Not at all—not at all!" disclaimed Rainsford, cutting the melon into nicely calculated portions. Miss Kenton was silent for a moment, then she said shortly:

"The cornmeal is out—I can't make a corn cake."

"Him—what's the matter with doughnuts? I'll fry 'em."

Miss Kenton looked at him doubtfully. "Well, I might try," she acquiesced finally, turning back into the pantry.

When the round, doughy things were ready, Rainsford, armed with a huge fork, presented himself at the stove.

"Very nice, you may try them while I fix a plateful," she said, somewhat, Friday usually. She found him a few minutes later dubiously eyeing a half-dozen hard brown rings which were draining on a plate.

"Why, what ails them?" she cried. "He shook his head.

"They—they're hard as rocks and flat as pancakes!" she gasped, picking one up and dropping it on the table.

"Perhaps you didn't mix them right."

"I made them straight according to rule," she returned with dignity. "It must have been your frying."

"Oh, but it couldn't have been," he demurred. "I never left them alone a minute. I flipped them over and over all the time."

A peal of laughter interrupted him.

"Oh—oh—you don't mean to say that you stood there and turned those poor things over every second?" she cried, as soon as she could speak. "No wonder their spirits couldn't rise—and just look at your fat! It's so hot it burned up what little life there was left!"

"Dear me, children, what a good time you are having!" called Mrs. Kenton from the doorway. "When she is young and in love one can find enjoyment anywhere."

Dorothy choked into instant gravity, while Rainsford made a low bow.

"I am in disgrace, madam," he said meekly. "I am guilty of too devoted an attendance upon doughnuts and—"

"Yes, you are," interrupted Dorothy severely, vanishing into the pantry.

At two o'clock a man from the hotel, in response to Rainsford's telephone message, brought a suitcase filled with the various articles he had sent for. The man laid the bag somewhat gingerly down on the extreme end of the walk and hurried away; then Rainsford went down and picked it up.

"How perfectly funny!" exclaimed Dorothy nervously, as he came back to the steps.

"It does seem queer," acknowledged Rainsford.

"Don't you two look contented!" called a merry voice, as three girls, stopped at the end of the walk. "How is Mr. Kenton, Dorothy, dear?"

"He is very comfortable," replied Miss Kenton with studied politeness.

"How absurdly polite some people can be," observed Dorothy, after a time.

"Very," agreed the man.

Dorothy looked at him sharply; then she sighed and folded in her chair.

"I don't like this deception," she protested.

"No? Then why not tell?"

She gave him a scornful glance.

"As if I could call out across the lawn to those girls: 'We aren't engaged any longer!'"

"Him—well, there's your mother," Miss Kenton frowned. "She has enough to trouble her now. As things are she'd be dreadfully distressed. I shall have to wait until father is better and you are good Rainsford."

"Oh!" murmured Rainsford. There was a long silence; then Dorothy sprang to her feet. She was almost hysterical with the tension of the last few hours. Things had scarcely improved since the morning, Rainsford had grown quite grave, and scrupulously polite.

"As hostess, I feel it my duty to entertain you," she announced sweetly. "If you'll look under the table on that shelf there you'll find some games. Make your selection and we'll play."

Dr. Kane arrived on the five o'clock train and went directly to the sick room. Fifteen minutes later Mrs. Kenton appeared on the veranda.

"Well, Jack, you are free," she said smilingly.

"Er—what—how?" stammered Rainsford, growing white and red by turns; there was but one kind of freedom in his mind, and that he had already most unwillingly received at the hands of Dorothy. He glanced at the girl now, but her face expressed only unalloyed joy.

"You mean the quarantine? It's over?" she asked eagerly.

Mrs. Kenton nodded. "Yes; that fussy little doctor was all wrong. It's not diphtheria at all, and your father will be all right in a few days."

"How perfectly glorious!" cried Dorothy. "I never believed father was very sick. Now we'll go off—let's see, what shall we do—ride?"

Rainsford caught his breath. "Yes; or we might go on the lake," he said, in a voice that he tried to make diplomatically unconcerned.

"Or we could play golf!"

"Him—or we've got just time to see the sunset from Peak's hill," he further suggested, with a swift sidelong glance at her face.

"Just the thing after being cramped up all day! I'll get into my walking skirt in no time." And she hurried through the hall door after her mother. The next minute she was back again with a dismayed face.

"Why, I—I forgot!" she faltered.

"Forgot? Forgot what?" he asked smoothly.

"Why, our—our—that things weren't the same any longer."

"Oh, never mind a little thing like that," he enjoined.

"But I—I was going to tell mother, and now—"

she paused helplessly.

"Now—I really wouldn't do it," supplemented Rainsford. "You see, it will be hard to make her understand after what you said just now," he continued, taking a shining golden cigarette from his pocket and fingering it nervously. "Hadden you better put this on, too, Dorothy?—she might notice it."

For a minute Dorothy hesitated. The vines were thick and the veranda very secluded, and Rainsford drew her very gently toward him.

"Well—perhaps," she murmured, holding out a slim, sunburned finger upon which he eagerly slipped the ring.

LEGION WOMAN, MOTHER OF 21

Mrs. Jacob Caranek, Healthy and Happy, Holds Record Among Producers of Americans.

Mrs. Jacob Caranek, who runs a neat little grocery store in New Orleans and there sells butter and eggs, bread, meats, canned corn and maybe the necessities for making those delicious "Southern pecan candles," is also a champion mother of the American Legion Auxiliary. She is, at least, until some one comes along who is the mother of 21 children, to beat Mrs. Caranek's 21.

A child had come to Mrs. Caranek's house each year for 21 years when America entered the World war.

Which of the 21 was dearest to her she herself could not tell, but when the two eldest boys, Joseph and Louis, went away to war the large Caranek family was cast into shadow. "What else should I do?" Mrs. Caranek questioned.

"They are Americans and their country needs them. If it is a duty to raise children, it is right to make them love their country." But when Joseph and Louis came home—Joseph served overseas with the Infantry division and fought in four big battles, while Louis fought in and around Camp Beauregard—the little grocery store could scarce contain the joyful celebration.

Mrs. Caranek came to America when she was fifteen years old, leaving her native village of Petravice in Czechoslovakia. She is forty-seven years old now and her husband is fifty-eight.

The youngest child is six years old and the oldest twenty-eight. Mrs. Caranek has been to but one motion-picture show in her life and she left before that one was over. She works from five in the morning until ten at night in her grocery. And she hasn't a gray hair and has never been sick but once and enjoys life.

NAMED FOR THE COMMANDER

Legion Member Pays Honor to New Son and the Leader of the American Organization.

Since the first time that America had a war, babies have come into the world named for a great or favorite general. The names of G. O. C. Washington are still numerous; those of Robert E. Lee and U. S. Grant are going strong into the second generation and there are not a few John J. Pershing Smiths and Joneses to vie with the less recent Deweyes and Teddy Roosevelts.

One service man of the American Legion has, however, started the naming of babies after the national commander of the Legion of the year in which the child was born. The first on record is young Hansford Morris, Atlanta, Ga., born a few days after Hansford MacNider, Mason City, Ia., was elected national commander of the Legion. His father, Albert R. Morris, is a member of Atlanta post No. 1 of the Legion.

Recently an ex-soldier of Chicago went into court and asked to be allowed to drop his middle name, which was unpronounceable, he declared. The court gave permission and the service man, an enthusiastic Legionnaire, chose the name of Legion to accompany him through life.

Legion Post Stages "Movies."

To satisfy curiosity-hounds, the Hollywood (Cal.) post of the American Legion stages a "movie" every week. This saves wear and tear on the nerves of the people in Movieland, and at the same time gives tourists a view of how movies are made. Real reel directors, cameras and stars are used in the model exhibitions—but the Legion does the work.

Consider "Star" Flag an Insult.

The idea, conceived by the W. C. T. U. of putting star flags in windows of homes where no liquor is consumed, is protested by an American Legion post in San Francisco, composed entirely of newspaper men. The Legion men claim that the liquor star flag is an atrocious plagiarism of the service flag of war days, and that it is an insult to all former service men.

To Halt "Fake" Money-Raising.

In an effort to stamp out the sale of publications by ex-service men who allege that the money derived is going to be used for the benefit of sick and wounded ex-service men, the American Legion national office has warned its 11,000 posts not to sanction any sale of periodicals until the Chamber of Commerce or some like civic organization has first approved.

POULTRY PRODUCTS

The butter market has been quiet, unchanged the past week but there has been an easier undertone and dealers as a rule are not expressing a great deal of confidence in the situation. There has been no speculative trading and sales have been for consumptive demand. Buyers, however, are trading very conservatively and are only taking enough to supply current needs. Western extras selling mostly at 35c with Northern extras in assorted sizes spruce tubs 38c-36c. Cheese market has been quiet with prices a trifle easier on all styles. Buyers are in the market mostly for bulk and are able to buy fancy goods around 21c-21c. Wisconsin Daisies and Young Americas sales ranging from 21c-21c. Egg market seems a little firmer and dealers were able to sell at a slight advance from last week's quotations. Supplies have been liberal on all grades but at present near by heavy and shoring up and good trade eggs are scarce. Current receipts selling mostly 23c-24c with finer quality and better style candied and graded up to 25c. Turkeys and Dishes 19c to 20c. Neary hennessy 34c-40c with fancy broilers up to 42c. Dressed poultry market steady to firm with supplies sufficient to meet demand. Fancy heavy fowl selling 32c-31c with demand and movement good. Fancy broilers selling 33c-34c with only a fair demand. Live poultry receipts showing up with a continued fair demand for fowl around 34c-36c and fancy broilers 26c-28c, white leghorn broilers 20c-24c.

Receipts of calves light with light and medium lots going at 10.00-11.00, few choice 11.00-12.00. Light supply, hogs steady, bulk 10.50-11.00, per 100 lbs. Trading on fresh meats only fair.

THE TWO DAYS' PROGRAM IN DEDICATION OF THE HAMPTON COUNTY MEMORIAL BRIDGE

spanning the Connecticut river between Springfield, Mass., and West Springfield, opened with a regatta and dedication ball. The following day's program included the dedication proper in the afternoon, preceded by a historical parade, in which practically all of the 23 towns and cities of the county had teams. Governor Cox delivered the chief dedication address. The bridge was begun in the spring of 1920 and has cost, including approaches, not far from $5,500,000.

Vegetables, fruits and nuts are sold by weight or number in Massachusetts, beginning August 20, under a new law which abolishes the old dry measure of bushels or pecks as the standard. The new law is the result of an investigation by a special commission appointed by the Legislature of 1921. The commission, headed by E. Leroy Sweetser, in charge of the department of labor and industries, found opinion against the "bushel weight" measurement. Dealers are now required to retail fruits, vegetables and similar commodities on the basis of avoirdupois weight or numerical count. An exception is made in the sale of goods in the original unbroken packages, where the package or container is according to legal standard.

Governor Cox has appointed an advisory coal committee headed by James J. Storrow of Boston, who served as Massachusetts fuel administrator during the war, to have charge of the rationing of coal in the state next winter. He named Mr. Storrow as consignee to receive all coal shipped into the state. Mr. Storrow will have an established credit of $10,000,000. The other members of the committee will make recommendations to him as to the amount of coal to be distributed to each city and town. The committee also will pass upon the credit of coal dealers. The governor wired Secretary Hoover that there was a deficit of 1,800,000 tons of bituminous coal and 1,100,000 tons of anthracite in the state of the basis of receipts to date this year as compared with last year. In a letter to the secretary, he promised earnest co-operation in ensuring equitable distribution of coal in Massachusetts.

Gov. Cox has nominated Courtenay Guild for re-appointment to the Boston finance commission, and Frederick W. Lawson of Fall River for re-appointment as chairman of the Fall River board of health. Other nominations, all for re-appointment, were Arthur B. Daniels of Adams, Greylock reservation commission; Morgan J. McSwaney of Salem; clerk of the first district court of Essex; Henry V. Cunningham of Boston, state bail commission, and Dr. Oliver H. Howe of Cohasset, medical examiner, second Norfolk district.

ROADS STAND BY LOYAL EMPLOYEES

Tell President Harding Old and New Men Must Be Protected in Strike Settlement

NOT A MATTER OF CHOICE

Faithful Employees Have Both Legal and Moral Rights to Seniority and Other Benefits.

New York, N. Y., Aug. 2nd.—The keynote of the reply made by railway executives representing more than 130 Class I railroads of the United States to the proposition of President Harding that "All strikers be returned to their work and their former positions with seniority and other rights unimpaired," lies in the last paragraph from their reply to the President as follows:

"It is submitted that the striking former employees cannot be given preference to employees at present in the service without doing violence to every principle of right and justice involved in this matter, and without the grossest breach of faith on the part of the railroads to the men at present in their service."

"Under these circumstances, it becomes apparent that the railroads cannot consider any settlement of the present strike which does not provide protection in their present employment, both to the loyal employees who remained in the service, and to the new employees entering it."

The executives had accepted the first two conditions proposed by the President, namely, that both employers and employees accept the decisions of the Labor Board, and that all lawsuits growing out of the strike be withdrawn; and in relation to the third condition spoke not only as quoted above, but also as follows:

"Agree With the President."

"The railroad executives and managers agree entirely with the President's statement in his letter that it is wholly unworkable that the railroad Labor Board can be made a useful agency of the government in maintaining industrial peace in the railway service unless employers and workers are both prompt and unquestioning in their acceptance of its decisions."

"Many men in the service refused to join the strike and in so doing were assured of the seniority rights accruing to them and of the permanency of the jobs. On some important lines some fifty percent of the men refused to join the strike. To these old loyal employees have been added thousands of new men who were employed and could be secured only upon a definite promise that their services would be retained, regardless of the settlement of the strike, with all the rights appertaining to such employment, including that of seniority, under the working rules and regulations previously approved by the railroad Labor Board."

"Just The Opposite Effect"

"We especially point out that a refusal to the old men who remained in the service and to the new men who accepted service, of the rights of seniority incident to their employment, would have just the opposite effect to that desired by the President, and would most seriously discredit the Labor Board."

"The Board itself prescribed the Rules of Seniority under which the men referred to have secured their seniority rights, and the railroad companies have neither the legal nor moral right to deprive these men of those rights. By public utterances since the strike began, the Board has recognized and emphasized these rights, and to deny them now would instead of upholding the Authority of the Labor Board, overthrow its rules and discredit

LEGION MAN, AID TO CUPID

Henry Sullivan, Phoenix (Ariz.) Organization Enthusiast, as J. P. Ties Many Knots.

Having secured plenty of experience in braving the perils of the deep while a member of the navy during the war, Henry J. Sullivan of Phoenix, Ariz., is now helping to launch the several ships of matrimony that set sail from his home city.

When the service men of Phoenix start their wedding barks they seek out Justice of the Peace Sullivan to unship the lines of their single blessedness.

Mr. Sullivan is also the man who started the "Order" one head, the American Legion's slogan which has been adopted by all the war organizations of his home county to advance the interests of the service men, carry on hospitalization work, eliminate drives and working generally for the benefit of the men who served their country.

As Mr. Sullivan himself expresses it: "All war organizations in the county have united under one head for the purpose of centralizing our work. We expect to lend our efforts largely to hospitalization work and in other ways serving the disabled service men by placing the responsibilities on the various departments of government where they belong rather than by advancing their rights in a slipshod fashion."

There will be no Tuesday evening worship, Aug. 15, and no services at the Methodist church on Sunday, Aug. 20. Camp meeting begins Saturday, Aug. 12 and closes Aug. 20.

The Ladies' Aid are invited to the home of Mr. John Anderson, Thursday, Aug. 10. There will be a picnic supper on the lawn. All are asked to bring drinking cups for the coffee.

WEST BETHEL CHURCH
W. O. Thomas, Minister
A man was once traveling in a very barren part of our country. He asked an old settler what was their main crop. The old man answered shortly, "Men." Do you think he meant merely big, husky plants? Did you ever stop to think that the Almighty takes these same elements that make up a strong man physically, and by combining them in a different way makes a male that has many times the strength of a man? Man then adds his brain to the male and makes a very powerful, efficient, and intelligent combination. But this combination makes a powerful, efficient, and intelligent male—not a powerful, efficient, and intelligent man. Man is distinguished from other forms of life by his upward look. To deny once self the upward look is to deny the distinguishing feature of manhood. Isn't it worth while to you to break away from the cattle, or the soil, or the week day toil, and think about the things that make a man truly a man? Worship in your church on Sunday. It will be a help to you, and to others.

Morning worship at 10:30. Theme, "The Bible."

Sunday School at 11:30.

Evening devotion at 7:30. Theme, "The Fraternity of Jesus."

Only six Sundays more do we have together this summer. Be sure and come.

A community playground will be made by the Legion at Nashville, Tenn., the ex-soldiers bearing the expense of apparatus and upkeep.

In Russia American ex-soldiers, most of them missionaries under the leadership of a Russian Presbyterian minister, have formed a part of the Legion.

During the war it was Paris, France, that was the center of the Legion's activity. The Legion's headquarters were in Paris, France, and the Legion's members were in Paris, France.

The only woman field clerk in the Legion is Miss Jean Hild of Paris, Maine, secretary to Major General Hild, who holds the rank of brigadier general.

The Legion in both North and South will celebrate the birthday of General Lee and Grant, great leaders of the Civil War. The birthday of General Lee will be celebrated on Aug. 27 this year and that of Lee will be celebrated on Aug. 27, 1923.

Perishing Addressing Legionnaires.
A powerful ally in the person of the motorman, featured in front of the trolley and demanded a speech.

The rear platform of the car was turned into a speaker's stage and "Black Jack" addressed the service men and their friends for ten minutes. The Legionnaires were marshaled together by Sidney Morgan, their post commander, who stood on the platform with his old general, and it was not until he had given the word that the former members of Perishing's command would give the trolley the right of way.

Adjusted Compensation Wins.
Adjusted compensation won a decided victory in the nation-wide referendum by the United States Chamber of Commerce—4,116 chambers voted favorably, 2,657 against the measure. The United States chamber has opposed the bill from the start. The commerce body in Toledo, O., protested the questionnaire which was sent out as being unfair in the way it presented the subject.

WEST BETHEL CHURCH

W. O. Thomas, Minister

A man was once traveling in a very barren part of our country. He asked an old settler what was their main crop. The old man answered shortly, "Men." Do you think he meant merely big, husky plants? Did you ever stop to think that the Almighty takes these same elements that make up a strong man physically, and by combining them in a different way makes a male that has many times the strength of a man? Man then adds his brain to the male and makes a very powerful, efficient, and intelligent combination. But this combination makes a powerful, efficient, and intelligent male—not a powerful, efficient, and intelligent man. Man is distinguished from other forms of life by his upward look. To deny once self the upward look is to deny the distinguishing feature of manhood. Isn't it worth while to you to break away from the cattle, or the soil, or the week day toil, and think about the things that make a man truly a man? Worship in your church on Sunday. It will be a help to you, and to others.

Morning worship at 10:30. Theme, "The Bible."
